"Heart Breakers"

One-reel Star Comedy

FLORENCE and Clifford are madly in love with one another; but Florence's father is determined that she marry Count MacAroni. He takes his daughter to their beach home until she will promise to wed the man of his choice. Cliff follows, and in order to see Florence frequently, dresses as a woman and is admitted as a guest.

A rumor spreads that this woman is immensely rich, and the Count immediately makes a play for her, forgetting all about Florence. An unexpected rival, Florence's father, falls for Cliff's disguise and tries to outwit the Count.

MacAroni forces attentions on the masquerader and enters Cliff's room as he is about to enjoy a cigar. Cliff kicks him out and is about to take off his disguise when Florence's father enters with a bouquet of flowers. Seeing the cigar on the table he accuses the "woman" of having another suitor. Cliff says he, or rather "she," wouldn't have a distrustful lover, and drives him out of the room.

Later, Florence gets a cramp while in swimming, and the Count displays a yellow streak. Cliff rescues her, but loses his wig in the excitement. He gains father's consent, however, by telling him he saved Florence from "taking the Count," and is forgiven for his deception.
